At this presentation Dr Elisabetta Nadalutti analyzes the implications of cross-border activities on patterns of integration and governance in cross-border-regions following the implementation of EU cross-border-cooperation programmes and Regulation 1082/2006 (i.e. European Grouping of Territorial Cooperation). She focuses on cross-border-governance between Italy and Slovenia and investigates the impact on the governance of the border by emerging and strengthening regional factors.

With special comments from H.E. Ambassador David Daly, Head of Delegation of the European Union to Australia

Dr Elisabetta Nadalutti is an Erasmus Mundus post-doctoral researcher in European and Asia-Pacific studies at ANU Centre for European Studies, The Australian National University, Canberra. She holds a PhD and a MA (Hons) degree from the University of Bath and BA (Hons) degree from the University of Udine (Italy). Her research interests are focused primarily on issues of governance, citizenship and identity in cross-border areas. She has conducted research on the impact of the European integration process in relation to civil-society mobilization and identity construction. She has presented at numerous international conferences and has published over 4 academic articles in a range of social and interdisciplinary journals.
