

School of Education and the Centre for Lifelong Learning

Research Seminar

The Irish African Partnership for Research Capacity Building: Harnessing Knowledge for Poverty Reduction

Dr Mary Goretti Nakabugo, Research Fellow, Irish-African Partnership for Research Capacity Building Project

Dr Rob Mark, Head of Centre, Centre for Lifelong Learning, University of Strathclyde.

Venue: Conference Room

Centre for Lifelong Learning

Level 7
Graham Hills Building
University of Strathclyde
Glasgow

18 February 1-2pm

(a sandwich lunch will be available from 12.30pm)

This seminar will focus on the opportunities presented for promoting educational research with African countries. It will draw on the experience of the Irish African Partnership for Research Capacity Building which has sought to promote institutional collaboration for development-related knowledge generation, knowledge exchange and mutual learning.

Dr Mary Goretti Nakabugo works in the field of education and is currently a research fellow with the Irish-African Partnership for Research Capacity Building. She formerly worked at Makerere University, Uganda where she was Head of the Department of Curriculum, Teaching and Media in the School of Education. She was previously a Visiting Professor at the Centre for the Study of International Cooperation in Education, Hiroshima University, Japan.

Dr Rob Mark is Head of the Centre for Lifelong learning, Strathclyde University. Previously he was Director of Education at Queen's University Belfast where he collaborated on the Irish-African Partnership for Research Capacity building project. His research interests include lifelong learning, community learning and literacy.

All Welcome

